In this tutorial we'll use Shared Preferences in our android application to store data in the form of key-value pair. n Shared Preferences allows activities and applications to keep preferences, in the form of key-value pairs similar to a Map that will persist even when the user closes the application. Android stores Shared Preferences settings as XML file in shared_prefs folder under DATA/data/{application package} directory. The DATA folder can be obtained by calling Environment.getDataDirectory(). SharedPreferences is application specific, i.e. the data is lost on performing one of the following options: on uninstalling the application on clearing the application data (through Settings) As the name suggests, the primary purpose is to store user-specified configuration details, such as user specific settings, keeping the user logged into the application. To get access to the preferences, we have three APIs to choose from: getPreferences() : used from within your Activity, to access activity-specific preferences getSharedPreferences() : used from within your Activity (or other application Context), to access application-level preferences getDefaultSharedPreferences() : used on the PreferenceManager, to get the shared preferences that work in concert with Android's overall preference framework In this tutorial we'll go with getSharedPreferences(). The method is defined as follows:
 getSharedPreferences(String PREFS_NAME, int mode) PREFS_NAME is the name of the file. mode is the operating mode. Following are the operating modes applicable: MODE_PRIVATE: the default mode, where the created file can only be accessed by the calling application MODE_WORLD_READABLE: Creating world-readable files is very dangerous, and likely to cause security holes in applications MODE_WORLD_WRITEABLE: Creating world-writable files is very dangerous, and likely to cause security holes in applications MODE_MULTI_PROCESS: This method will check for modification of preferences even if the Shared Preference instance has already been loaded MODE_APPEND: This will append the new preferences with the already existing preferences MODE_ENABLE_WRITE_AHEAD_LOGGING: Database open flag. When it is set, it would enable write ahead logging by default Initialization We need an editor to edit and save the changes in shared preferences. The following code can be used to get the shared preferences.
 SharedPreferences pref = getApplicationContext().getSharedPreferences("MyPref", 0); // 0 - for private mode Editor editor = pref.edit(); Storing Data editor.putString("key name", true); // Storing boolean - true/false editor.putString("key name", "string value"); // Storing string editor.putInt("key name", 1); // Storing integer editor.putFloat("key name", 1.0f); // Storing float editor.putLong("key name", 1L); // Storing long editor.commit(); // commit changes Retrieving Data Data can be retrieved from saved preferences by calling getString() as follows: pref.getString("key name", null); // getting String pref.getInt("key name", -1); // getting Integer pref.getFloat("key name", null); // getting Float pref.getLong("key name", null); // getting Long pref.getBoolean("key name", null); // getting boolean remove("key name") is used to delete that particular value. clear() is used to remove all data editor.remove("name"); // will delete key name editor.remove("email"); // will delete key email editor.commit(); // commit changes editor.clear(); editor.commit(); // commit changes Project Structure The activity_main.xml layout consists of two EditText views which store and display name and email. The three buttons implement their respective onClicks in the MainActivity.
