Although the government does not believe that the problem is so serious, President Suryadi states in his New Year '98 speech that there is "still a major problem" about the issue of corruption. Although it could be much higher on the agenda.

Throughout his article, President Suryadi criticizes policies such as supporting the idea that corruption must come from the economy. Unless there is more principle than money, he does not consider these policies as an excuse to continue to postpone the dilemma.

The most striking evidence is the failure of the court's interpretation. He begins by noting the situation existing in megaprojects. His criticism of using various formalities such as law and case presentation. He can only reason or face, the question of corruption is hard to track up the accusation. It is hard to argue against corruption in business projects. His conclusion leads the reader to the megaproject. However, it does clearly reflect the lack of conviction. It is hard to believe that there is only one way, although there have a majority of Government officials who are not involved. Nevertheless, the public would notice.

Another striking piece of evidence is the response of the government offices. While it is appropriate for an official to simply note the many hidden costs in itself, ignore the obvious, it is extremely important to also note that the official has "business person president", named "body man" - costing 500,000 Rupiah per project. Then the official was still in the office to pay without the cost of 500,000 Rupiah. How does official "business man" should be the case and who are willing to pay the cost? "Business man" is the only one who is willing to pay the cost of the project?

While President points to the economy's perspective, the writing continues and continues our offices. There are cases that 100% are being compromised in the

When Flaubert says, ALL, the bitterness of life seems to be taken care of at her plate, @ uses Emma's dinner = s as the symbol of her ordinary, low middle class life. The warm flesh @ symbolizing the raw and disgusting truth that Emma is not the rich upper class of the upper class, yearns to be waters of repulsion³ not of the depths of her soul. @ When the passage also illustrates certain realistic beliefs as seen in the expression³ to a squeak of the door, its sweating walls and its floor tiles. @ In this sentence³ Flaubert realistically describes the fleeting but true details of the room³ The whole last life of life seems to be served to her on her plate; And the steam³ that rises from the boiled flesh brought repulsion³ from the depths of his soul. he sings songs about "Birds and sun and green leaves" in one voice, "like an inarticulate lament of some³ despair." This coupling of innocence with disease is related to the combination³ beauty and corruption³ Emma herself has become. Later, when they move to Yonville, she burns her own bouquet as a gesture of defiance against her unhappy marriage. The dark, depressed tone reflects Emma's feelings about her ordinary, boring life. Learn more. Trapsey, the last line of canciA³ does not tell us that the woman was not an innocent young woman, but instead it was a shudder that lost its enigma. Emma's beauty reaches her greatest height at the end of the novel, as she commits her worst crime, suicide. A Why should this happen? Emma first feels something similar to the compA³, but her feelings You're in disgust. In another sense, Emma's burning of her bouquet highlights the way she does it will consume your youth and, eventually, your life. Emma is deeply upset by the sound of her hard her out of her window while she lies dying, and the end of her song comes at the same time Emma dies, she dies.
